December 30, 2016

The cease-fire agreement reached in Syria today offers a new opportunity for the Syrian people to reassert their rights to freedom, justice and dignity.

The Syrian Coalition highly commends the steadfastness and courage the Syrian people are showing in their struggle against the Assad regime and its allies and their firm commitment to the guiding principles and goals of the revolution.

The Coalition urges the Syrian people all over the homeland as well as in the diaspora to make the day of Friday, December 30, an occasion to renew commitment to the revolution and its goals of freedom, dignity and ending tyranny in all its forms in Syria.

Today is an occasion to honor the fallen heroes; to remember the pain and suffering the detainees in Assad's prisons are going through; to stand by the bereaved mothers; and to support the steadfast FSA fighters.

All Syrians at home and abroad are invited to take to the streets to peacefully demonstrate and express their vision for Syria and its future as well as to stand by what is right against falsehood, tyranny and foreign occupiers.

Long live Syria and its people, free and with honor.
